

Book Publishers

Book Publishers usually publish by contracts and sometimes are known as Independent Publishers. They usually ask to be queried first, and then later may ask for a synopsis, chapter by chapter outline, proposal, or the complete manuscript. Sometimes they will ask for more than a query the first time.

Be sure to read all their guidelines at the web site so that you submit everything to their standards. Do not ever send a completed manuscript to a publisher unless told otherwise. If you do this, it is usually a waste of time. They will put them in a slush pile and more and likely not even read it. So it is always a good idea to query them first if you do not know what else to do.
